Toe caps

Composite toe cap-A composite toe cap is a non-metallic protective reinforcement used in safety footwear, made from materials like carbon fiber, fiberglass, or heavy-duty plastic.

Steel toecap- it refers to a reinforced, heavy-duty metal cap built into the toe box of protective footwear. It shields the feet from falling objects, heavy impacts, and compression hazards in industrial, manufacturing, and construction .

Sole

A double-density sole uses two distinct layers injected together: a firmer upper layer for structural support and foot stability, and a softer lower layer for ground cushioning and slip resistance.

INSOLE

It is a removable or built-in insert placed inside footwear underneath the foot. It provides comfort, shock absorption, moisture management, and structural arch support. The right insole improves posture, distributes body weight evenly, and helps prevent foot fatigue or pain.

SOCKS

It is the bottom, innermost part of a shoe that your foot directly rests upon. Often synonymous with an insole, a well-designed It is contoured to mimic the natural shape of the foot, providing crucial arch support, shock absorption, and weight distribution to reduce fatigue during movement.
